Email to Representative:

Dear Congressman/woman _____,

As your constituent, I am writing today to urge you to pass H.R.5129 – Global Food Security Reauthorization Act (GFSA). In 2016, GFSA was signed into law with overwhelming bipartisan support. Since its passage, the GFSA has strengthened the accountability, implementation, and effectiveness of food security and nutrition programs, and reinvigorated a global commitment to help people feed and nourish themselves.

These vital programs combat global food insecurity by investing in agriculture development and building resiliency in developing countries. By equipping communities with the tools they need to help feed themselves, our global nutrition and food security programs have increased food and nutrition security for millions of people through improved agriculture production, market access, business development, private sector competitiveness, and nutrition interventions.

Please pass the Global Food Security Reauthorization Act, so we can continue to help millions of people move out of poverty, reduce the number of children suffering from malnutrition, and strengthen local and regional economies in some of the world's poorest countries.

Sincerely,

To the Editor of the _____,

In 2016, the Global Food Security Act (GFSA) was signed into law with overwhelming bipartisan support. Since its passage, the Global Food Security Act has strengthened the accountability, implementation, and effectiveness of food security and nutrition programs, and reinvigorated a global commitment to help people feed and nourish themselves.

The Senate recently passed bipartisan legislation to reauthorize the Global Food Security Act (S.2269), reaffirming the United States' commitment to fighting hunger and poverty worldwide. Now, the House needs to pass the its version.

These vital programs combat global food insecurity by investing in agriculture development and building resiliency in developing countries. By equipping communities with the tools they need to help feed themselves, our global nutrition and food security programs have increased food and nutrition security for millions of people through improved agriculture production, market access, business development, private sector competitiveness, and nutrition interventions.

I am writing to encourage your readers to call their Congressman/woman to urge passage of H.R.5129 – Global Food Security Reauthorization Act, so we can continue to help millions of people move out of poverty, reduce the number of children suffering from malnutrition, and strengthen local and regional economies in some of the world's poorest countries.

Sincerely,

Your name and address.
