Alliance to End Hunger believes...

1. Ending hunger in the United States is possible within a decade;

2. Ending hunger worldwide is attainable in a generation;

3. Ending hunger requires a strong public commitment and greater leadership from the U.S. government;

4. Ending hunger is not solely the role of government nor is it solely the role of the private sector;

5. Ending hunger is the shared responsibility of individuals, the private sector, communities, faith-based organizations, civil society and government;

6. Ending hunger means prioritizing nutrition programs for vulnerable people – children, women, elderly, displaced and disabled;

7. Ending hunger means providing opportunity for people to lift themselves out of poverty;

8. Ending hunger means ending market distortions that stifle economic growth, particularly in agriculture, and entering into agreements that expand trade, along with capacity building that lifts people out of poverty and supports market-led economic growth;

9. Ending hunger includes broad efforts to secure peace and prosperity in areas where people are struggling.
